Council votes to keep one-year mayor's term

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

With Mayor Christopher Cabaldon dissenting, the West Sacramento City Council last week adopted a resolution to set the term of the city's mayor at one year.

Cabaldon had proposed setting the term at two years -- a proposal he had told the News-Ledger he would support even if it doesn't apply to his own, current one-year term which ends next month.

Vice mayor Mark Montemayor, who is unofficially "in line" to be the next mayor if the position is rotated on a yearly basis, explained why he supported the one-year term.

"I was seeking to make the issue of the mayorship as non-controversial as possible," said Montemayor. "I see having the mayorship made a one-year term as a way of rotating the position around, so you don't get the infighting."

He added that the council still has the power to remove a mayor at will, and still has the power to give the post to the same person for more than one term.

The council will choose a mayor and vice mayor from among its ranks every November.

Arsenic levels at Newport found not to be a risk

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Arsenic levels found on a 270-acre planned subdivision in Southport do not pose a significant threat to future homeowners, a private study has concluded. Developer Seecon Financial & Development will be required to place clean dirt over contaminated areas during the construction process for the 844-home project north of Linden Rd., but will not be required to truck out any of the questionable soil.

Matthew Geisert, a senior hazardous materials specialist for Yolo County's Dept. of Health, reports that its file on the arsenic at the Newport Estates site is "closed."

"It was formerly an orchard site," he summarized. "We got a report from the contractor hired by Seecon to do some work out there that they found some elevated levels of arsenic -- not really high levels, but above the U.S. E.P.A. remediary levels."

The highest arsenic levels detected at the site were spots with 44 and 70 parts per million, he added. The arsenic is believed left over from pesticide use at the former orchard.

Seecon hired NewFields Inc., a West Sacramento firm, to perform a "human risk analysis" for these levels.

"They recommended the developer cap the site with clean fill just during construction phase," said Geisert.

Harry Gibson, a senior planner for the West Sacramento Community Development Dept., reports that Newport Estates will be one of the next subdivisions to be built in the city.

"They'd like to get their (surrounding) walls in and show models this year," said Gibson.

The project is located on Linden Rd. east of Jefferson Blvd. and north of Redwood.

Restitution on bad checks

The Yolo County District Attorney's office reports that its Check Prosecution Program recovered $24,139 in restitution for Yolo County merchants in September, much of which was paid before criminal proceedings began. The program pursues those who write bad checks to local merchants.

Businesses who have received "NSF" checks or checks written on closed accounts, and who are not able to receive cooperation from the check writers, are invited to contact the program at (530) 666-8200 for information. The West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, at 1414 Merkley Ave., also has forms to complete to participate in the recovery program.

Annual parade marches on by—

West Sacramento's annual Community Day Parade returned to West Capitol Ave., with entries from both this city and surrounding communities. Fine weather and plenty of smiles descended on the event, for which city redevelopment agency employee Art Schroeder served as announcer.

The event was sponsored by the city, the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, and Arco.

A picnic organized by local churches followed the parade at Little League Park.

Spectators may view rowing races from new bridge on Sunday

West Sacramento's River City Rowing Club will host a regatta Sunday morning at the Port of Sacramento.

Attending will be River City and other rowing clubs as well as university crews from UC Davis (which also trains at the port), Sacramento State, UC Berkeley and elsewhere.

The racing will be autumn-style "head racing," with crews departing one after another down a three-mile course and finishing near Stone Lock. Start time is approximately 8 a.m. Winners are determined by best elapsed time within their category.

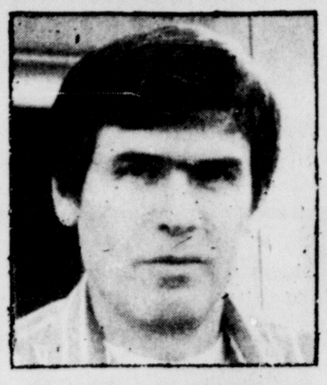
This style of racing differs from the end-of-season racing which occurs mostly in April and May, and features crews racing side-by-side over a distance of about 1.25 miles (a "sprint").

Spectators may watch from the Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge and surrounding area, getting a good view of the teams as they dash for the finish line. Teams will launch and depart from the River City Rowing Club and UC Davis Crew boathouses on the port's turning basin.

For more information on the races or on joining River City Rowing Club, call 371-7723.

Real travelers should also take a trip to Victorville

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

I recently came across a newspaper article that reported on National Geographic Travel magazine's "50 must-see spots for the complete traveler." For example, under the category of urban spaces were listed the beautiful cities of Barcelona, Hong Kong, Istanbul, Jerusalem, London, New York, Paris, Rio de Janeiro, San Francisco, and Venice. There were plenty of other categories, too, and here are some of them, along with most of the destinations:

World Wonders: The Taj Mahal in India, Vatican City, the Pyramids in Egypt, the Acropolis in Athens, the Great Wall of China, and Machu Picchu in Peru.

Country Unbound: The Alps in Europe, Big Sur on the California coast, the Canadian Maritime Provinces, coastal Norway, Danang to Hue in Vietnam, England's Lake District, the Loire Valley in France, North Island in New Zealand, and Tuscany in Italy.

Wild Places: The Amazon forest, Antarctica, Australian Outback, the Canadian Rockies, the coral reefs of Papua-New Guinea, the Galapagos Islands, the Grand Canyon, the Sahara desert, the Serengeti plain, and Venezuela's Tepuis highlands.

Paradise Found: Italy's Amalfi coast, the British Virgin Islands, the Greek Islands, the Hawaiian Islands, the Pacific Islands, the Seychelles in the Indian Ocean, and Torres del Paine National Park in Chile.

Anyway, a few days after I had come across the "50 must-see spots for the complete traveler", I found myself in a conversation with one of my kids (she wishes to remain anonymous from now on) and it turned out that she had seen the same article.

"How many of those places have you been to, Dad?" she asked me.

"Oh, not that many, I'm afraid."

"I think traveling is the best education a person can have," she continued. "Don't you?"

"Traveling is definitely important," I agreed.

"Did you do much traveling before you married Mom?"

"Well, the Army sent me halfway around the world to visit Vietnam for a year. Does that count?"

"Sure."

"I don't know," I said, thinking back to the newspaper article, "but if you ask me, I think National Geographic left some really important places off that list of theirs."

"Like what?" asked my daughter.

"Well, like Victorville, California, for instance."

"Victorville, California?"

"That's right."

"You mean that little town in the Southern California desert we visited last year -- the one where they had that museum for that old cowboy?"

"Hey," I quickly reminded my daughter, "Roy Rogers wasn't just your ordinary, run-of-the-mill old cowboy. He was the king of the cowboys."

"Whatever. But all that museum had was a souvenir shop and a bunch of old photographs. There wasn't really much to look at."

"But you're forgetting the most important part."

"Which was?"

"Trigger!"

"Oh, you mean that stupid stuffed horse that was there?"

"Hey, Trigger was anything but stupid!"

"But he was stuffed, Dad. Now why in the world would anyone do that to a horse?"

"What, you think it would have been better to put a beautiful animal like that in the ground to rot?"

"And if I remember right," continued my daughter, warming to the task, "he wasn't the only thing that was stuffed in that place, either. What about that poor other horse that was there? And that cute little dog?"

"Well," I guessed, "Roy probably figured that if he was going to stuff Trigger, he might as well go ahead and stuff Buttermilk and Bullet while he was at it."

As our conversation veered away from travel and got mired in the pros and cons of taxidermy, I couldn't help but think back to my youth and the slow moving days leading up to puberty when I proudly carried a Roy Rogers and Dale Evans lunch pail to school each day and was never without my Roy Rogers cowboy hat and six-shooters on the weekends.

"So," asked my daughter, "you really think Victorville ought to be on National Geographic's top-50 places to see?"

"Well," I tried to explain, "all I know is that there was definitely a time in my life when I would have gladly traveled anywhere in the world just to get a glimpse of the King of the Cowboys sitting on top of the most beautiful horse that ever lived."

Senior Georgina Arch named queen of court

During ceremonies at half-time of last Friday night's varsity football game, senior Georgina Arch was chosen as this year's River City High School Homecoming Queen.

Georgina, who plans to go on to college next year and study to be a police officer, said, "The other two girls, Casey Slagerman and Mariah Blazak, were just as deserving, but I'm very happy to be this year's Homecoming Queen. It was an honor to be selected and it will always be a wonderful memory."

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The Boston Red Sox pulled off one of the most inspiring comebacks in baseball history with their 12-8 victory over their archrival Cleveland.

The Indians controlled their own destiny in the American League playoffs leading the best of five series two games to none. The odds were stacked against the Red Sox especially after ace pitcher Pedro Martinez went down with a sore back in the first game and the Indians pounded the Red Sox pitchers in Cleveland. Baseball historians always talk about the Red Sox "Bambino" curse that supposedly happen over sixty years ago when the Red Sox traded Babe Ruth to the Yankees. The Red Sox scored 23 runs on Sunday!

They out scored nine NFL teams last Sunday! Well, the Red Sox behind the hitting of Nomar Garciaarra and Troy O'Leary, who until Monday was hitting .125 with no RBI, beat up the Indians on Monday. After the Indians intentionally walked Nomar twice to get to O'Leary, who hit the first pitch both times, one for a first grand slam and the other for a three run home run. O'Leary ended up with a seven RBI and two home runs performance and now the Red Sox are off to New York for the best of seven American League Championship series starting on Wednesday. This was a wild series in which the Red Sox lost two games then scored 44 runs in the next three. Can the Red Sox shake the Bambino Curse and win the World Series? The Yankees have the best pitching staff in the
A.L. but can they stop the Red Sox momentum? The answer is probably yes but I like the Red Sox anyway. The Red Sox win in seven games!

The N.L. playoffs are set to start in Atlanta as the Braves prepare to host the New York Mets starting on Monday. The Braves beat Houston to reach the Championship series for the eighth consecutive time and for the seventh time in a row their facing a new opponent. The Braves have beaten the Mets nine out of 12 times this year. The Braves have the pitching but once again I will go against the odds and take the underdog Mets. I guess you can say I don't like the boring Braves.

The 49ers took a 42-20 beating from the Rams (4-0) last Sunday that should wake them up for the contest next Sunday at home against Carolina. The Rams, who are the only undefeated team left in the NFL, looked like a team on mission picking apart the weak 49ers secondary for five touchdowns. The 49ers thought their problem was playing without Steve Young but I think they better work on their lack of pass rush and better bump and run pass coverage. Young may sit out another week and don't be surprised if the Niners hold him out longer with their bye week coming up on October 31.

The Raiders (2-3) lost 16-13 to the limping Denver Broncos and now will go back to the drawing board this week when they travel to Buffalo for another tough game. The Raiders had their chances against the beat up Broncos but a key interception and six Bronco sacks help Denver win their first game of the year.

My weekly picks dropped to .500 (6 wins, 6 losses) after Detroit lost to San Diego and the Jets looked very weak on Monday Night football. My only winner was Arizona over the Giants. Well, let's see if I can climb back over the .500 mark this week. In week six I like two visiting team. The Vikings (-4) will take out their frustration on the Detroit Lions and the Seahawks (-1 ½) will win in San Diego. On Monday night I'll take the N.Y. Giants (+3 ½) and the points at home against the Cowboys.

How about the Sacramento State Hornets (4-2, 2-2 Big Sky Conference) football team moving back into the Division I-AA Top 25 for the second time this season. Following a 41-14 victory over Portland State on Saturday, the Hornets were rated 23rd.

See ya next week!

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial:

No school bond if there's no matching state money

The local school board may jump through another hoop to appease critics of a $17.54 million bond proposal scheduled for the ballot next month.

The school district hopes that the $17.54 million bond sale (if approved by two-thirds of the voters) will pull in $20 million in matching money from the State of California. The bond payments made by local property owners, then, will get more "bang for the buck" by being coupled with these state funds.

Bond committee members believe that now is a good time for the bond. The state has construction funds available and West Sacramento would be in good position to apply for the $20 million, they feel. But several citizens have expressed concern that the matching funds are in no way a sure thing. They point out that West Sacramento could approve the local bond measure and commit itself to the longterm bond payments it will bring, without receiving the expected state match.

To assuage these worries, the school board has scheduled a new policy resolution for discussion tomorrow. The resolution says that, even if local voters approve the bond measure by the required two-thirds vote, the district will not sell the $17.54 in bonds unless the matching $20 million in state funds are actually "available and provided by the State." In other words, local property owners won't go into debt unless the state chips in, too.

This resolution deserves -- and will probably get -- the board's support.

With the matching money, Washington Unified School District would be able to perform $37.54 million worth of renovation and improvements to local schools while creating only $17.54 million worth of local debt. Tying the two funding sources together assures local residents that they will get the best possible return from their investment, and removes one more possible reason to vote "no" on Measure R.

The board has also swallowed some of its pride and agreed to allow a citizens' oversight committee to help monitor how the money is spent.

What else, precisely, do district voters need from them before passing a school bond?

Cow pie is on News-Ledger editor's foot

Ardeene Westvik is a member of the Washington Unified School District Board of Trustees. She is responding to a Sept. 29 News-Ledger editorial.

Having spent my youth on a dairy farm in the midwest, I could not resist responding to your September 29 "cow pie" analogy editorial. Since it was often my duty to get the cows from the pasture for milking I learned that one has to be very nimble to avoid stepping in cow pies. I also learned that they are often large enough for a second foot. Is it possible that the editor placed his foot in a cow pie also?

The editor stated that the Washington Unified School District Board of Education meeting closed session agenda for September 23 listed only the subject of expulsion of three students. WRONG! The closed session agenda also included personnel recommendations relating to employment of certified personnel, two new positions, revised position, employment of classified personnel, increase in hours, change in assignment, cessation of service and a discussion of non-re-election of probationary employee. It is possible that the recommended high school principal had not yet agreed to accept the offer of employment at the time the agenda was printed but that position could be included in the employment of certified personnel.

Education code 54954.2 does require that brief agenda descriptions be provided and Ed. code 54954.5 provides some formats. But it is important to note that the "law does not require use of these particular formats".

Every agenda also requires the agenda to be approved at each meeting at which time additions and corrections can be included. The minutes of each meeting will almost always include an addendum to the personnel recommendation. Board agendas are printed almost a week in advance since the change to Thursday meetings so additions are and will continue to be common place.

ARDEENE WESTVIK

The editorial also states that the board met this summer in closed session to discuss modifying the requirements for graduation for a specific student without it being included in the agenda. It is not possible to place on an agenda something a parent wants to say to the board when we are not aware the parent is going to appear. Should we not listen to a concerned parent that wishes to speak with the board about their child? Speaking about a specific student must be in closed session. If the board acts in what might be considered the "spirit of the policy" rather than "letter of the policy" in a unique situation, should the board be condemned? I suggest most parents would understand if it concerned their child. Graduation requirements were never discussed in closed session. When graduation requirements are discussed, it will be in open session.

I would even argue that the July incident relating to the hiring of an interim principal may not have been a violation of the Brown Act. The board did meet with a possible candidate since Dr. White had just resigned and it was already the end of July. No vote was taken. Unfortunately, there was an error in the press release. The board did appear to come to a consensus and that a vote would be taken at a future meeting as it was.

Apparently the editor feels he has his finger on the pulse of the community when he states that the public has little faith in WUSD's leadership. Has he take a poll? I have lived in this community since 1959 and I certainly can't speak for the public although I have been involved with this school district since that time as a parent, PTA president, teacher, administrator and board member. I'm not sure how the public feels but I think I am able to judge how the district is progressing. I recently made a list for a community member of 15 positive district accomplishments completed in the past several years. I would like to list some of them in case the public's attitude is as negative as suggested.

1. Classes in grades 1-3 have reduced class size to a maximum of 20 students. Additional classrooms and equipment were provided in a timely manner. Classes were not housed in cafeterias or libraries as in many other districts.
2. All elementary schools now have excellent libraries with an employed aide. This district has never provided libraries for elementary schools in the past.
3. Schools have made a tremendous advance in technology. All schools have computer labs and River City, Yolo High, Golden State and Southport are connected to the Internet.
4. Southport School was opened on time and is being paid for without district bond indebtedness.
5. Plans for a reasonable bond election are better planned and organized than any previous bond issues. Plans for upgrades at all schools have been planned and are specific. The passage of this bond issue will upgrade the facilities for all children.
6. Exceptions to budget audits have been eliminated. Yearly audits have been positive in the past two years.
7. The district is doing more to plan for interventions for students at risk than at any time in the past. This is very important for our students.
8. California Standardized Testing and Reporting (STAR) program results indicate an increase in National Percentile Ranking in 33 of the 49 areas tested when compared to 1997-98 school years.

It is my understanding that there are areas in this country that participate in the "throwing of cow pies/chips". I suspect journalists take much pride in this sport. But as one that has spent 49 years of my life involved in education, I really wish newspaper editors would spend just a little more time looking for the positive things that are happening in education. When is the last time some of the outstanding programs in the district were mentioned? The Engineering Science and Technology Program, the Early Start Program or the Greenhouse Project might be a good start. I welcome thoughtful criticism but let's be sure it is relevant, accurate and balanced.

The Fall Book Sale of the East Yolo Friends of the Library, held October 2-3, brought in just over $1,000. This money is used to supplement the library budget and provide more books, audio and video tapes, and children's programs.

The good selection of books as well as the low prices continue to draw a good crowd on both days. About 2500 books found good homes with eager readers.

The next book sale will be held in mid-January with a new selection of books.

Sewer service & port assets

At a late September, 1999 West Sac City Council meeting several Arlington Oaks residents complained that their septic tanks were malfunctioning and pleaded for assistance. So upon noting on the October 6 agenda City Council was to take action approving changes in the Bridgeway development (formerly Gainsborough & Gateway) -- just across Jefferson Blvd. from Arlington Oaks -- I asked City Council why the new development plan could not be modified so as to include sewer service for Arlington Oaks, with financing coming from (perhaps) a Mello-Roos assessment district. (Any contract can be amended with approval of all contracting parties.) Since there was no response, it is hoped a response will be shortly forthcoming. Maybe owners of undeveloped adjacent land will lead the way.

The next agenda item of last week was a workshop about the Port of Sacramento and its future with out city. The part that bothered me most was port manager's bragging about port's assets as if assets equaled net worth: i.e., no liabilities. The standard accounting equation: Assets = Liabilities + (net) Ownership still applies. So for all we know, port's liabilities could be as much as its assets, in which case Ownership would be zero! And what method does port use for evaluating its assets (cost, market value or other?) So even if port does have 1,000 West Sac land acres and 3,000 total acres, taxpayer's leaders must think just like financial institutions: Net worth, not simply assets, is the key to value. These factors must also be considered if Sacramento considers turning over control of the port to our side...where it is located.

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS

The Sacramento River registered two feet four inches, United States gauge at the Southern Pacific bridge yesterday. This reading was taken at low tide, but nevertheless shows the stage of the river to be extremely low although considerable rain has already fallen. It would seem that the extreme dryness of the watershed in the foothills soaked up what rain fell immediately on precipitation leaving none to flow into the streams and the outlet of the Sacramento Valley, the Sacramento River.

Wallie Fraser, of the firm of Doyle & Fraser, whose service station is on Fifth street, spent the greater part of last week attending to the business of the firm in Sacramento. At Twenty-first and Y streets the firm purchased another service station and are enjoying a wide trade in referring their Sacramento friends to the Washington depot and again in steering their Washington friends to the Sacramento station.

A warrant was issued last Thursday for the arrest of Steve Martinelli for sealing beans in the Natomas section in Sacramento County. The warrant was served by Deputy Sheriff Murphy accompanied by Constable Buckingham. The Independent could not learn who it was that swore to the warrant, but evidently they had some information that led to the arrest of Martinelli. His Ford touring car was seen in the vicinity of the ranch where the beans were stolen and the license number being taken it was traced to Martinelli's home. He is out on bonds waiting for trial in Sacramento County.

For permitting his stock to run at large, Tim Moreglia was arrested by Constable Buckingham last Tuesday, and on appearing before Judge Barry was fined twenty dollars. Tim had been careless about confining his stock within his premises of late and after several complaints had been made against him there was nothing else for the constable to do but to place him under arrest. He promises to be good in the future after paying his fine.

E. M. Joseph was tried in Judge Barry's court room last Tuesday on a charge preferred against him of cruelty to animals. The complaint was sworn to by H. J. Winters when it was found that one of Joseph's cows had been stalled in an irrigation canal in West Sacramento for over thirty-six hours. Winters claimed he had notified Joseph to provide water for his cattle but failed to do so with the consequence that the animals wandered to the side of the canal and were unable to drag themselves out. Judge Barry did not consider the case a strong one because no material damage was done the animal and Joseph promised to remove his stock from the locality or supply them with water. The case was dismissed without prejudice.

Reports from upriver points indicate that there is a large run of salmon in the Sacramento River but because the season is closed no fish are being taken at the present writing. It is reported that at the mouth of the Feather River, where the stream is low, shoals of fish can be seen passing up the stream. Local fishermen who have been using the rod and line report salmon plentiful in the neighborhood of the Sacramento River bridge and the mouth of the American River.

The condition of Mrs. Esther Newton was reported to be greatly improved yesterday, although during the past week she was seriously ill. Her daughter, Myrtle, Mrs. Weatherbee of San Francisco, has been with her since she became seriously ill, but expects to return to her home next Saturday or Sunday.

George Beale left here last Saturday on a pleasure and business trip to Los Angeles. He expects to return next Monday or Tuesday.

Mrs. Mary E. Duncan of Cottonwood has been at the home of her niece, Mrs. Alice Allerton, for several days of the past week and expects to remain until Saturday or Sunday. Mrs. Duncan is a former resident of Sacramento, having been born in the Capital City from pioneer parents, who came to the state in '52.

It is a long way to the State of Nevada for deer but Jack Allerton and a friend of his made a trip last week to the foothills outside Reno to get some venison. They had been advised that deer were plentiful in that neighborhood but after a thorough search of three days they failed to get even one shot.

Thirty-three children of Washington Wednesday were vaccinated at the Washington grammar school by a Woodland doctor and nurse here for that purpose.

Mr. and Mrs. William Auhagen have returned from a two weeks' sojourn at Stinson Beach.

Mrs. O. P. Cook is visiting in Napa as the guest of her sister, Mrs. William Gordon.

Mrs. Amelia Dempsey has left for Hobart Mills, where she resides, after visiting with friends and relatives in this district.

Joe Beltrami is ill at one of the Sacramento hospitals.

Mrs. Amelia Dempsey of Redding is visiting in Washington as the guest of Mrs. Clarence Painter.

Judge Barry has just returned from a fishing trip. He had an exciting time. He really caught a big one. For two hours he had trolled in vain. In desperation he turned to the shore for the last time. Scarcely had he started to pull in his line, when—tug, a huge fish swallowed his hook. The whole boat lurched.

For two hours they fought, the fish and the man. He pulled this way and that; the fish ran to the north, south, east, and underneath. It was terrific. The man's arms tired rapidly, when he looked up and perceived an island close by. "Ha!" said he, triumphantly, and managed to get on shore, where he tied the fish to a huge oak tree.

"I shall come back in the morning after him."

The next morning he went back. The fish had pulled the island a mile to the northwest.

6000 Acres of West Sacramento To Be Exploited

Just before going to press word was received by the Independent that G. M. Jones, accompanied by three McAnulty brothers, had arrived at West Sacramento to promote the sale and exploitation of nearly 6000 acres of the district.

It is understood that the name of the townsite will be changed to "Westgate," and the work of placing it in shape for sales will start immediately.

It is also understood that the new promoters have secured many parcels of land outside those owned by the West Sacramento Company. The exact acreage to be disposed of is 5988.65 acres.

Owners of land in the district outside of the West Sacramento Company who sold to the newcomers could not be learned by this paper.

POOR HEALTH FORCES CATHOLIC PRIEST TO RETURN TO OLD HOME

Next Monday evening, October 20, Rev, Father I. Marcucci will leave Sacramento to return to his old home in Italy in the endeavor to recuperate his health and strength.

Three years ago Father Marcucci was a visitor in Italy for a period of about three months, and during that time gained considerably in health and strength.

Lately again his health started to fail him and even with expert medical attention he failed to rally.

Father Marcucci has been attending the duties of pastor of the Catholic Church in Washington during the past five years. Patiently and steadfastly he pursued those duties although at times the task was not encouraging.

The parish is poor and those who could contribute to the support of the priest did so with as much grace as they possibly could.

Before leaving Father Marcucci desires to say farewell to all his people and invites them to call at his home on Third street before next Monday evening.

The young ladies of the parish have been circulating among their friends asking them to call and encourage Father Marcucci before his departure and it is for this reason that the pastor extends a hearty welcome to all residents to call and see him before his departure.

The Independent understands that no provision has yet been made by Rev. Bishop Keane to send a priest to take care of the parish during Father Marcucci's absence. Catholics who have been attending the local church may attend the services at the Cathedral or the little church at Third and O streets in Sacramento.

PLACING SHOULDERS ON COUNTY HIGHWAY TO ELKHORN

Unloading about fourteen carloads of macadam every day at the spur track on Harriett street, Supervisor Beardslee is having shoulders placed on the county highway from the end of the Southern Pacific bridge to the Waldeck ranch, seven miles north on the river levee road.

This contract was awarded by the board of supervisors of Yolo County on October 1 to Teichert & Son of Sacramento.

The bid was $3.31 a cubic yard.

The total distance on which the shoulders are to be placed is about 7.15 miles.

This is a very practical improvement on the roadway, especially at points north of Rose orchard, where the loose sand at certain points has slid away from the permanent roadway built about a year ago.

At some points it was always necessary for auto drivers to get out on the sand when passing large loads of hay or other material being taken to town by farmers.

Bridge Tender Killed in Auto Smash Last Saturday; Driver of Car Is Held Responsible by Coroner's Jury

Hurled off the Southern Pacific bridge into the Sacramento River when a guard gate on the bridge was struck by an automobile, George Erbs of Washington, bridgetender employed by the railroad company, was killed instantly at midnight Saturday. It is believed he suffered the injury which caused his death when his body struck a piling.

Ed Corder, tractor operator on a ranch near Woodland, driver of the machine which hit the guard gate and who failed to stop after the accident, is held in the city jail on an open charge pending an investigation being conducted by Detective Sergeants Ed Brown and E. J. Cox, and Detective Walter Nelson.

Corder did not learn that Erbs was killed until yesterday morning when he read an account of the accident in a newspaper. He immediately went t othe police station and gave himself up. He told the detectives the reason he did not stop at the time was that he thought he was being made the victim of a holdup.

Erbs, long in the employ of the Southern Pacific, completed his day's work at midnight and was "breaking in" Antone Mello of the Welcome Hotel, a new bridgetender.

A short time before the accident Erbs opened the bridge to give Mello a demonstration. He had closed the bridge and was preparing to close the guard gate on the east end of the bridge when the accident happened.

Corder was en route from Woodland to Sacramento at the time. He told the police he thought it strange the bridge was open to traffic at one end with the guard gate closed at the other. H esaid he heard some one say "stop" and believing an attempt was being made to hold him up, he drove through the gate.

The gate swung back and struck Erbs, knocking him off the bridge. Corder did not stop.

Corporal Lew Warren and Patrolman E. B. Harris were summoned and directed the hunt for Erb's body. Arthur Dassonville, 414 Fourth street, Washington, and Frank Gale, 611 Fourth street, Washington ,obtained a rowboat and with several others rescued Erbs.

The bridgetender was rushed to the emergency hospital, but Dr .E. O. Brown said Erbs' death evidently was instantaneous. His body was taken in charge by Coroner John T. Skelton. An inquest will be held at a date to be set later.

Corder told Brown and Nelson that he drove to Wilkinson's Garage on L street, between Sixth and Seventh, after the accident and told a garage man to repair the headlights on his automobile, because he had struck the guard gate on the bridge.

He then went to his room at the Central Hotel, ignorant, he said, that anybody had been killed. When he heard Erbs had lost his life, he immediately gave himself up.

The only actual eyewitness to the tragedy are Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Means, general delivery, San Francisco. The detectives are trying to find Means and his wife to get their version of the accident.

Circumstances surrounding the accident will be presented to District Attorney J. J. Henderson to detrmine what action, if any, is to be taken against Corder.

At the inquest held by Coroner Skelton last Wednesday night a jury returned a verdict that Erbs came to his death by being struck either by the guard gate or an automobile or by both due to the reckless driving of Ed. Corder, who disregarded a red signal on a closed gate on the Southern Pacific bridge.

JAMES ARRESTED AGAIN FOR SALE OF JACKASS IN BOATHOUSE

Last Tuesday federal agents from Sacramento raided the boathouse occupied as a home by Captain A. E. (Jitney) James. James was placed under arrest and lodged in the city jail in Sacramento.

A small quantity of jackass was found in the boathouse.

During several years past Jitney James has been ekeing out a partial existence from the sale of liquor to those who would patronize him.

He is practically blind, seldom leaving his boathouse and barely existing on the profit made from the sale of his goods. He solicits no trade. He is a quiet individual. He has no relatives or friends and it is believed that during a period of over fifty years he has seldom or never been under the influence of liquor.

Unable to earn a living by hard labor and unable to procure the necessaries of life through any other vocation, he adopted this method of earning a livelihood to support him several years ago. Fully aware that he was breaking the law, he continued to do so in order that he might not become a charge on the shoulders of the taxpayers of Yolo County.

About a year ago he was arrested for a similar offense and when taken before a Sacramento judge his case was dismissed because of the pathetic plea he made in his own behalf, being unable to employ an attorney.

In this instance Jitney James acknowledges his guilt also, but he says that he would rather break the law and be self-sustaining rather than become a charge on the taxpayers subject to the charity of the people during the few remaining years of his life.

Jitney invited no one to his boathouse. They came voluntarily. They patronized him more to help him than to consume his jackass. The small amount he sold didn't cut much figure, but since he paid no rent for the boathouse and lived with the utmost frugality, he managed to get along on the profits from his sales.

He knew that others in his neighborhood were selling lots of whiskey to residents of the jungles south of the M street bridge and he saw bootleggers grow rich from their manipulations. He therefore believed himself entitled to do a little for himself so that he might exist without charity.

His sight failed him several years ago but he knew the road to his camp so well that even in the blackest night he could tread with safety the gang-plank that reached from the levee to his boathouse.

But the Volstead law is ruthless and the officers must make a showing and Jitney James is in jail waiting for judgment under the Volstead law.

LEINBERGER NOT RESPONSIBLE IN AUTO ACCIDENT

M. P. Kirby, a resident of Sacramento, was struck and injured last Saturday night at Twelfth and H streets, when on his way home he walked directly in front of the automobile driven by Walter Leinberger of Washington.

Driving east on H street Leinberger was proceeding slowly when Kirby walked out from the curb directly in front of Leinberger's car, although at the moment he did so, Leinberger was tooting his automobile horn.

Kirby is 62 years of age and an employe of the Samuels Cigar Store at 400 J street.

Immediately after the accident Leinberger took him to the emergency hospital where he made a statement to Detective Henley that he was entirely blamable for the collision. His injuries were slight.

He was taken to the emergency hospital by Constable Buckingham and treated by Dr. E. O. Brown. He was later removed to the county hospital.

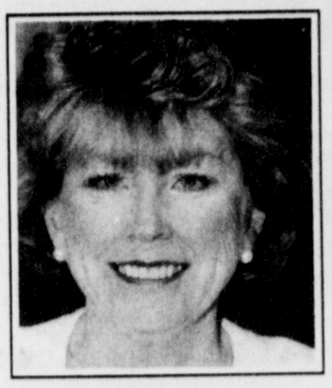
Board member Eklund honored for service to schools

The Yolo County School Boards Association recently held its 16th Annual Fall Awards Banquet and Washington Unified School District School Board Trustee Irene Eklund was presented with this year's Golden Apple Award.

The award is given to county school board members "In recognition of their community service, expertise, decision making, and leadership for the betterment of the school district."

Eklund is the first WUSD School Board Trustee to be honored with the award, although former WUSD Trustee and longtime West Sacramento resident Grace Ohlson also received it in 1987 as a board member for the Los Rios Community College District.

"I feel very honored to have been nominated and then chosen by my fellow board members from other districts in the county," said Eklund, who has served on the WUSD Board of Education for 11 years.



IRENE EKLUND

"I think it's very important for parents and concerned citizens to get involved in their school district. Everyone can make a difference and there is nothing more important than doing everything we can to make sure the children of this community get the very best education they can."

If this were a ranking for Olympic Hockey, we would be outraged.

It's time we became just as concerned with how well we compete in the classroom. The fact is, America's schools haven't kept pace with the rest of the world. Our standards are not high enough. Our teachers are undervalued. Our communities need to be more involved. But it's not too late to turn things around. In some places, it's already happening. Find out how together we can bring about the kind of improvement we desperately need.
